

3rd vs. 5th DIMENSION

Everything is already in divine order. There's not an atom or a molecule out of place in the entire universe because everybody's getting back exactly what they ask for in consciousness through free will to receive the lessons needed in each moment.

It's just part of the process of being God/Goddess on Earth.

We are already the masters of our destiny, and we create our own reality in every moment no matter what so-called dimension we claim to be in.

In other words, we don't need to separate ourselves into higher and lower frequencies because everything is God.

The key is to live unconditional love with yourself and others while respecting everyone's right to be who they are without judgments or conditions.

The last thing we need is another so-called consciousness divide and conquer game to separate so-called 5th dimensional people from so-called 3rd dimensional people. We have enough separation on the planet already, and we certainly don't need any more of that.

When we live unconditional love and acceptance of our differences, everything else will take care of itself, and the world will maintain itself in a perpetual state of homeostasis.